Call for Expressions of Interest from colleagues in all AHRC disciplines in the Northern Bridge Consortium to contribute to our programme at the British School at Rome
January 2020

The Call

Northern Bridge Consortium has run two residential programmes for our doctoral cohort in partnership with the British School at Rome, and is issuing this call for expressions of interest from academic colleagues to participate in developing and delivering the programme for January 2020.

While full use is made of the opportunity a base in Rome affords, across any AHRC discipline, the programme is not primarily to deepen research in the city or region, but rather to expose participants to a range of skills and approaches that they might not usually expect to encounter in their field. The aim is thus to achieve a broader awareness of the breadth of arts and humanities research, and to open participants to new possibilities in interdisciplinary research.

The sessions are each designed to engage participants with radically different approaches and materials from antiquity to the twenty-first century, exploring advanced research methods. For example, previous sessions have included the bioarchaeology of manuscripts, the impact of Ancient Rome on British imperialism, the Grand Tour, object learning, archaeology and working in international collaborations.

Each session is scheduled for a half-day (or approximately 2.5-3 hours) and can be hosted in the BSR or across the city of Rome. Roughly one-third of the sessions are delivered by colleagues and fellows of the BSR and the rest from Northern Bridge Consortium colleagues.

The British School at Rome

The British School at Rome is one of the most prestigious research schools in Rome, and Britain's leading humanities research institute abroad. It has been home to world-class researchers of the art, culture and history of the western Mediterranean for over a century. The School is a bridge between the creative and academic researchers from Britain and the Commonwealth and the intellectual heart of Rome and Italy. Most researchers at the School engage with one or more of the School's major research themes: Rome: History, Place and Imagination; Landscapes and Urbanscapes; Language, Vision, Translation, Representation; Archaeologies of Knowledge; Connectivity in the Mediterranean; Church, State, Faith and Nation; Conservation, Heritage Management and Sustainability.

Travel, accommodation and meals

Under the terms of the AHRC grant to Northern Bridge Consortium, we are unable to fund travel or accommodation costs for staff working at any of the seven participating universities. As such, colleagues would be required to request funds from their home schools in order to participate in the programme.

The 2020 residential is scheduled for Monday 20th-Friday 25th January.

Expressions of Interest

The Northern Bridge Consortium directors would be delighted to hear from any colleague or group of colleagues who has an idea for a session on the programme.

To submit an Expression of Interest, please email Dr Annie Tindley on NorthernBridgeDirector@ncl.ac.uk with a brief description of the proposed session (250-300 words max please), indicating why it would be suitable for inclusion, and relevant to both the BSR and Northern Bridge students and a link to your staff page by Friday 30th August 2019.

We expect to be able to include a maximum of one member of academic staff/team from each Northern Bridge institution.

Contact

For further enquiries and/or previous programmes please contact the Northern Bridge Consortium Director Dr Annie Tindley on: northernbridgedirector@ncl.ac.uk

For reference, we attach the 2019 programme, although we are very open to new ideas.
